

KRUG Presents The Adventures of PETER WHEAT

Peter Wheat has captured Dragonel, Queen of the Hornets, and intends holding her captive until the cruel hornet knights promise to cease making war upon the tiny folk of the wheat fields.

Perhaps if you stay in a dungeon long enough, you'll learn that war does not pay

See - high in that hollow limb is your prison. The castle of the Wheat Queen is strong.

Your people will give me a fair trial, won't they, Peter Wheat?

Aye...

But the Wheat Queen is busy and your trial will not be held for some time.

So the Queen of the Hornets must rot in a dungeon!

It's your own doing.

See - our people hate you for the trouble your hornets have caused.

And what of your wrongs? Your people are forcing my hornets from the wild wood with your wheatfields!

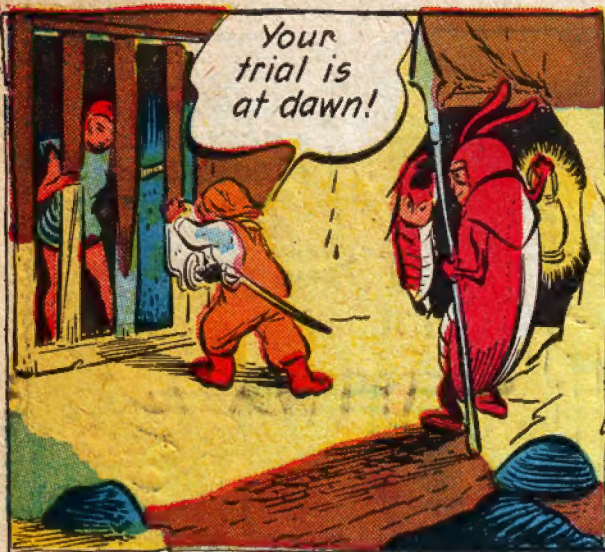

There is room for all!

Our job is to get Dragonel safely away—we cannot risk a contest with Peter Wheat...

Fly to the Wheat Queen under a white flag—tell her we have captured Peter and Sammy.

Get her to meet me to exchange prisoners—have her bring Dragonel! And we will give her a surprise!

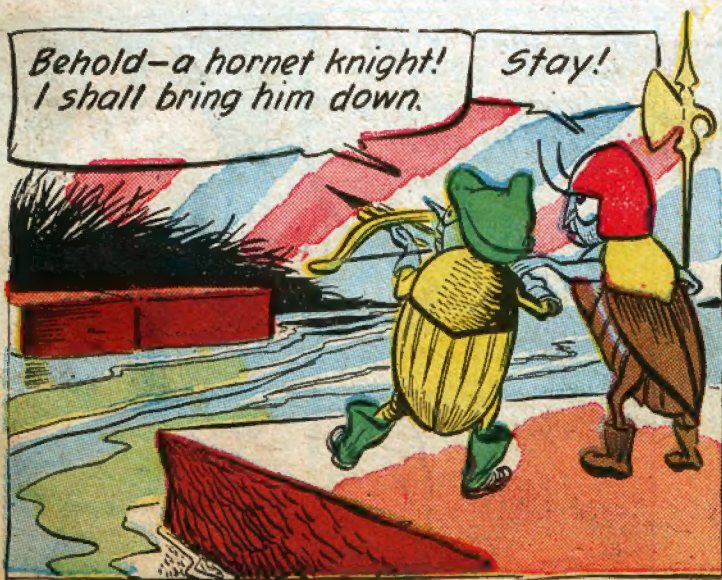

The Wizard must intend to capture the Wheat Queen.

Behold—a hornet knight! I shall bring him down.

Stay!

See, he carries a flag of truce.

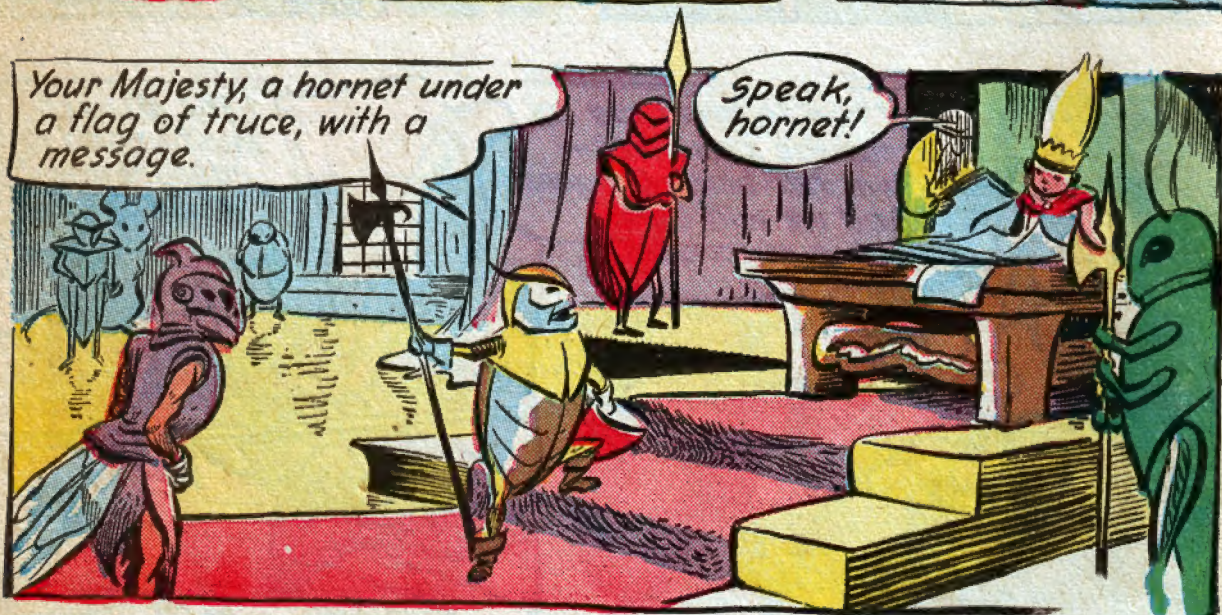

Take me to your Queen, varlets!

First throw down your weapons, ye treacherous dog!

One false move and an arrow into your back.

Your Majesty, a hornet under a flag of truce, with a message.

Speak, hornet!

We have captured Peter and Sammy. They will be put to death unless you exchange prisoners.

We'll hold you, hornet, as extra hostage! Where must I meet your master?

At the great willow—but you must have Dragonel with you!

Humph!

Dolt! This is a clumsy trap—if I am not back in half an hour, both you and Dragonel will have your heads chopped off!

But, your Majesty! Will you take no guard?

Nay—but see that my wishes are carried out.

When the Grand Wizard learns his daughter will be killed, he will not hold me.

Curses! The Wheat Queen, alone!

I'll speak to her alone.

We'll be out of sight - waiting your signal

What trickery is she up to?

Greetings, O Queen!

Wizard! I thought my steed was strangely annoyed.

State your case quickly - for if I am not back soon, I left orders for Dragonel's beheading.

You're a bold woman, Wheat Queen - do that and your son and Sammy Sweet will die!

'Tis you who are bold, Wizard...

For I'm sure now that you gamble with nothing.

You have no prisoners to exchange or they would be here! Good-bye!

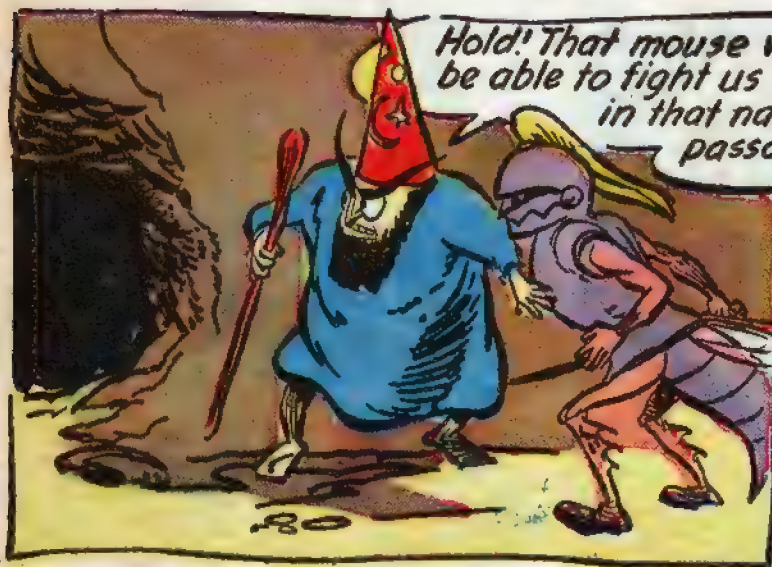

The Wizard's only hope to get Dragonel back alive is to capture me now—but if he doesn't soon, he will have to let me return so she will not be killed.

If he gets me before the time limit, he'll have time to bargain at the castle—Oh! They see our tracks!

Hold! That mouse will be able to fight us off in that narrow passage.

This calls for magic—akra bakra go dakra!

In a flash, the wizard changes himself to a serpent!

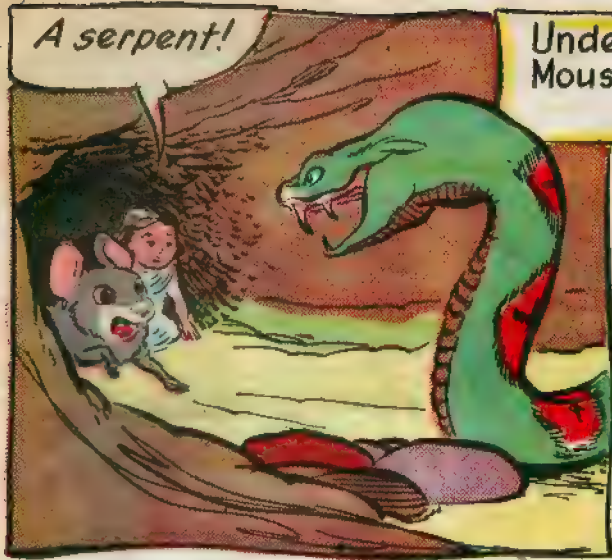

This will frighten them into surrender.

A serpent!

Under the serpent's hypnotic stare, the Mouse collapses—and the tiny Queen becomes faint.

Now! To the castle, quickly!

I will follow with the troops...

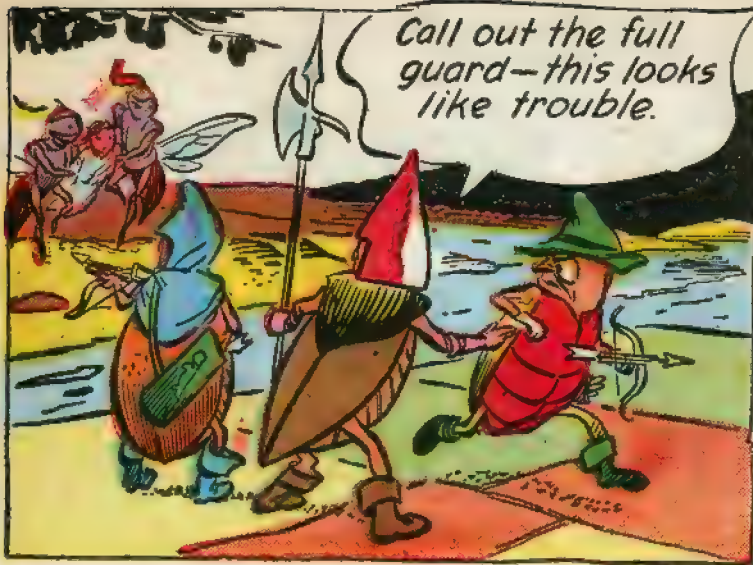

Behold! The hornets have captured our Queen!

Now they'll demand Dragonel!

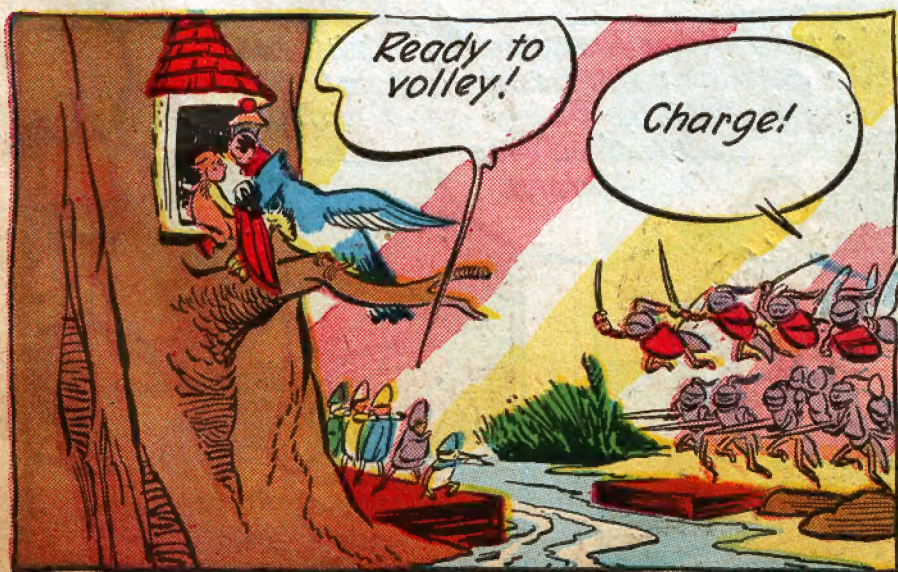

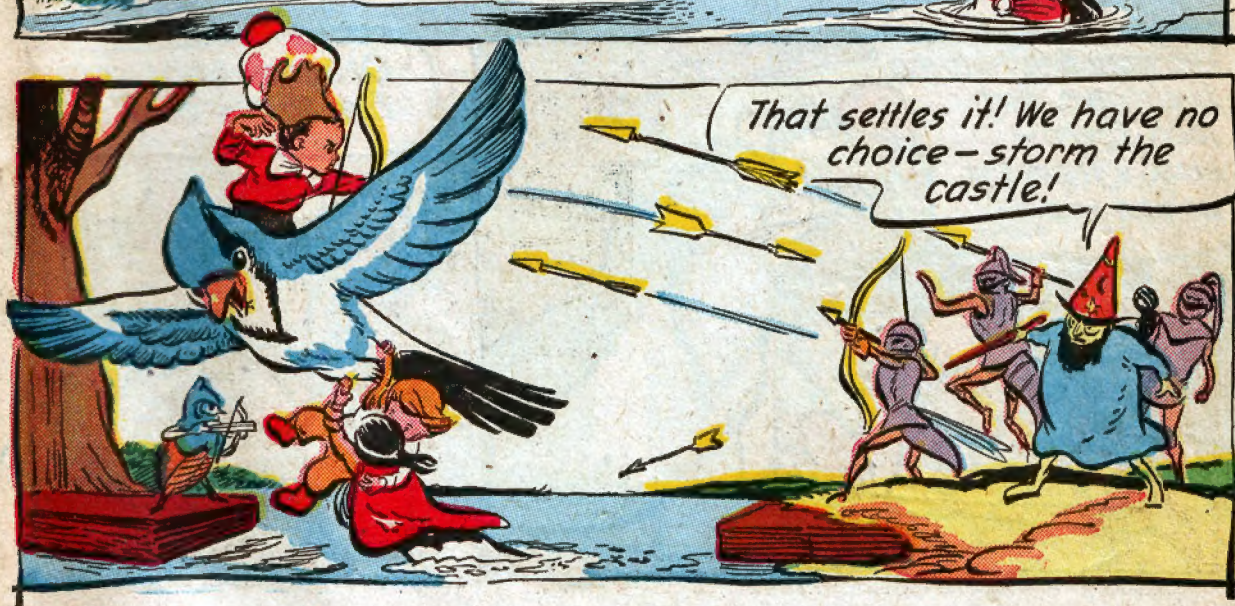

Hold onto Dragonel, men—I'm safe while you hold her—get Peter!

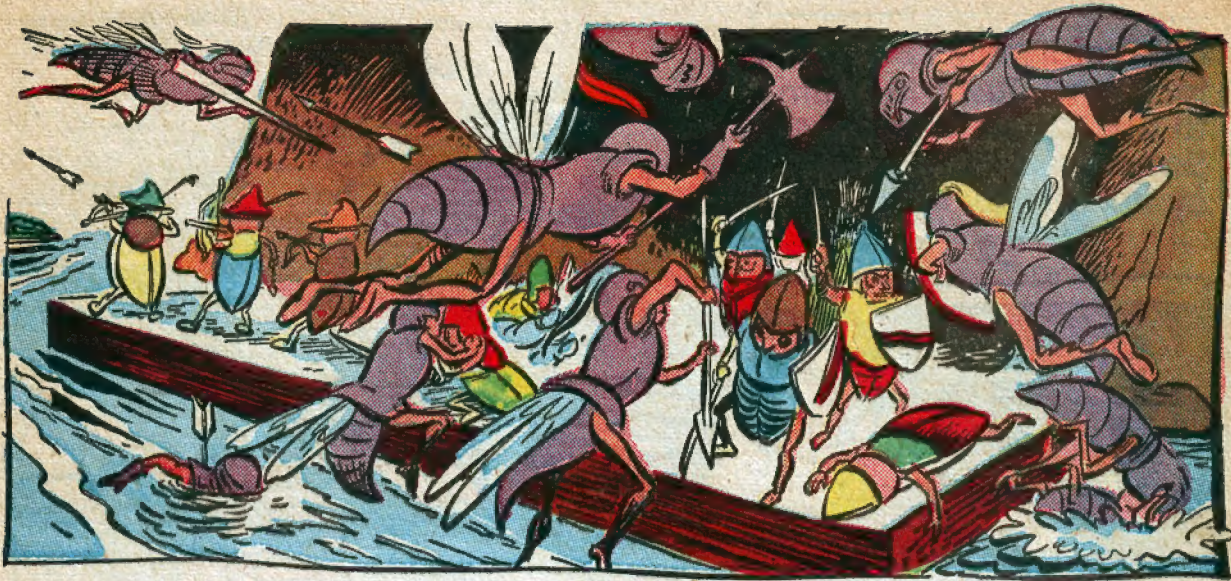

But, before the spell can force the Queen to return to the Wizard, Peter and Sammy swoop past, carried by the friendly blue jay.

The men are holding their own, but look there—smoke from the prison wing.

Dragonel has set fire to the castle!

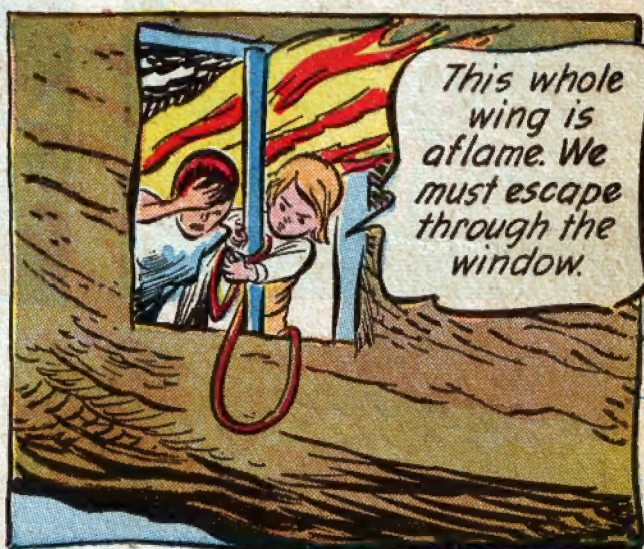

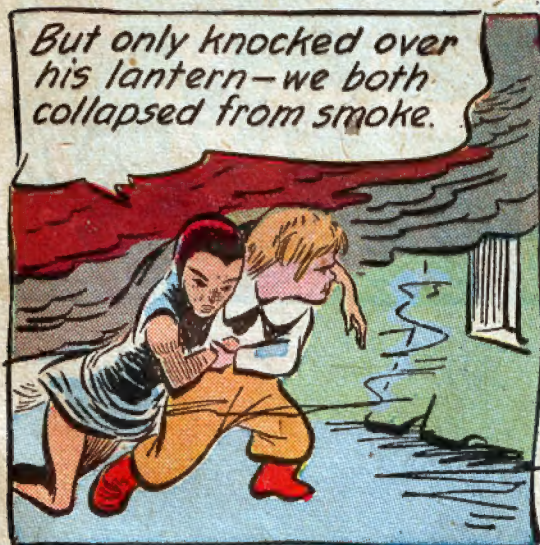

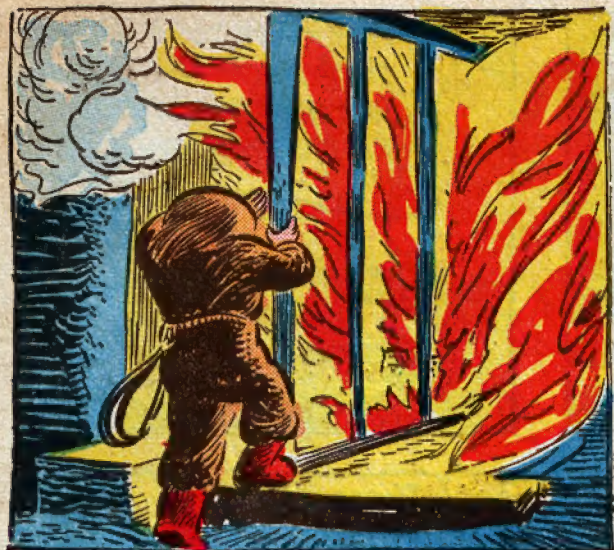

She must have knocked the guard on the head—
through the bars—
and kicked over his lantern.

Take him to safety and get fire fighters.
